SAYS BEST CORN DOES NOT COME FIRST YEAR

(By Associated Press)

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 20—Rich soil in Sangamon county, which in Indian dialect meant "Land of Plenty," and long years of careful study seed selection, produced the corn this year, which brought to Illinois last week, the 1921 grand champion sweepstakes prizes of America.

Only a country store, a grain elevator, three farm houses, and a muddy road mark the railroad station of Maxwell, 23 mile southwest of Springfield, where the ten ears of yellow corn were raised which won the grand championship.

From the decrepit railroad station westward, stretches the land of J. W. Workman, producer of this champion grain, the son and grandson of corn growers. His corn was awarded the championship in Chicago, at the International Grain and Hay Show.

Years of careful seed selection, his excellent land, the rotation of corn with alfalfa or clover pasture, are the three outstanding elements in his success.

Farmers about Workman's home, say the honor came of hard work, and his wife adds, "enthusiasm that kept him out of bed at night while all the rest of us slept," pouring over his grain with the same rapture that holds a miser.

"I'm a crank," Mr. Workman said. "You can't raise prize corn for twenty-five years and not be a crank."

Yet for all his corn growing and prize winning he has never seen a perfect ear of corn.

"Never," he said, "have I seen a perfect ear. Not one of the ten ears I sent to Chicago was perfect. All I could do was take the very best I had and hope they would stand up beside the others. In every ear I could see imperfection."

Of his 430 acres in the Maxwell farm, only 53 were in corn this year. They yielded 75 bushels to the acre, all yellow dent. That was picked out at first by Mr. Workman and his son, Rome Workman, who, his mother says, "is almost as bad as his pa about corn." That yield offered several bushels of "show corn." Then by the midnight oil, Mr. Workman with his keen eye for imperfections eliminated all but fifty ears, which were sent to the International show.

In the regional contest with Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, and southern parts of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio he won first for yellow corn; then took the highest regional prize for any kind of corn from the holder of the best white corn, which was from Missouri. Then he entered the sweepstakes. His best ten ears won.

"I have seen him down on all fours," one neighbor said, "picking his seed, grain by grain, culling out that which he felt fell below his standard. He would spread a big tarpaulin, pour the grain upon it, and then get down with it."

"Corn should not be planted for more than five years in succession in the same land," Mr. Workman said. His custom is to raise corn in a parcel of land four or five years, and then to plant it in alfalfa and clover and make it pasture land for ten or twelve years, renewing the land.

"Best corn never comes the first year," Mr. Workman said. "Corn that won the championship came from ground that was in its second year of corn."

What Kind of a Battery Would You Sell?

Would it be a cheap battery that the manufacturers wouldn't stand back of?

Or a high-priced battery that made no attempt at economy?

Or a sound, well built battery that sells at a fair price and that gives the most miles of uninterrupted service per dollar, as does the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery?

Experience has proved our wisdom in choosing the Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation.

Come in—and we'll tell you how it will save money for you.
